Pomeranian Chihuahua Mix: An Overview

Although classified as a toy breed, the Pomeranian-Chihuahua mix is well-known for being an excellent watchdog. They are constantly vigilant and protective of those they consider part of their pack. This mix is gaining popularity among small dog breeds.

These dogs are raised to be companions, which means they will unconditionally love their families. Because they were developed as lap dogs, they may be more attention-seeking than many other breeds.

It's important to note that this breed is particularly fragile and prone to fractures. Typically, a Pomeranian-Chihuahua mix will have a Chihuahua-like face, a petite size, and ears that tend to stand straight up. They are energetic and known for their fierce independence. While they are affectionate towards their families, they are also very protective of them.

The Pomchi is a small designer dog breed that's a cross between a Pomeranian and a Chihuahua. This hybrid combines the bold personality of the Chihuahua with the fluffy charm of the Pomeranian, resulting in a spirited and affectionate companion.

Traits of Pomeranian Chihuahua Mix:

Height: 6 to 10 inches (15 to 25 cm)

Weight: 4 to 10 pounds (1.8 to 4.5 kg)

Lifespan: 12 to 16 years

Coat: Fluffy or short, depending on genetics (single or double coat)

Colors: Cream, tan, black, white, sable, brown, or mixed.

What does a Pomeranian Chihuahua mix look like?

Their coats can vary in length, being short, long, or even double-layered, depending on their parentage. Most of them typically have soft fur; however, those with more Chihuahua ancestry may have coarser coats.

Chihuahua and Pomeranian mixes can come in a variety of colors, which may be solid or a combination of several hues. Common colors include white, black, tan, blue, brown, and cream, with brown being the most prevalent and black being the least common. While it is rare, some may have white tick markings throughout their coats.

If they are a mix of colors, they may exhibit a distinct or lighter shade on their chest or snout. The texture of their fur—either short and stiff or long and soft—depends on the genetic traits inherited from their parents. If they inherit more from the Pomeranian side, they will likely have long, silky hair and a fluffy tail. Conversely, if their genetics lean more toward the Chihuahua, they will have short, tight fur.

Personality and temperament of a Pomeranian-Chihuahua mix

The Pomeranian-Chihuahua hybrid breed is well-known for its independence and bravery. Once they form a bond with their owners, they become wonderful companions who love to lie in their laps.

These little dogs are very protective of their families when it comes to strangers and other animals. Their personalities can be described as feisty, bold, and loving.

Although they can be occasionally stubborn and quite bold, they remain a popular choice due to the abundant love and protection they offer. They enjoy playing games like hide-and-seek, relishing the reward of finding their favorite person. While they may not be the first to run around the yard or participate in activities like hiking or hunting, they truly cherish spending time with their family.

Should one consider adopting a Pomeranian-Chihuahua Mix?

Pomeranian-Chihuahua mix dogs are both affectionate and protective, making them wonderful family pets. However, it is important to note that they may not be the best choice for homes with very young children due to their delicate bones, which make them prone to injury.

These dogs require minimal maintenance, but they do need frequent brushing—several times a week—to prevent matting and the accumulation of dirt. They thrive in households with only one resident or no other pets, and their small size allows them to adapt well to apartments. On average, they need 1-2 walks per day and at least 30 minutes of total exercise each day for optimal health.

The coat of this breed can be either short or long. If your mix has short hair, it will require less maintenance. However, long-haired mixes will need more frequent brushing to avoid matting and to keep their coats clean.

Nutrition for Pomeranian-Chihuahua Mix

It is essential to feed this mix food specifically designed for small dogs, as they belong to the toy breed category. They should consume about 40 calories per pound of body weight each day to ensure they receive enough calories and nutrients. Firm, dry food is ideal as it can help maintain healthier and cleaner teeth and gums. If offering canned or wet food, it should only be given in small portions. Since different brands have varying recipes and ingredients, always check the labels; this mix requires about 18% protein in its diet.

Medical Conditions

While this breed generally enjoys good health, they can still develop certain hereditary conditions, such as:

- Hypoglycemia
- Heart problems
- Elongated trachea

To help prevent or address these health issues early on, regular veterinary visits are essential. With proper care, the average lifespan of a Pomeranian-Chihuahua mix is about 13 to 18 years.

Cost of Owning a Pomeranian-Chihuahua Mix

The cost for a Pomeranian-Chihuahua mix puppy typically ranges from $150 to $1,000, with higher prices coming from reputable breeders.

Training a Pomeranian-Chihuahua Mix

When training your dog, use consistent language. For example, if you want them to sit, use "sit" instead of alternating between "sit" and "down." This breed may take a little longer to train, but it is not impossible. Experts recommend starting training early, as they can be a bit stubborn.

Socialization is also vital. One effective way to train your Pomeranian-Chihuahua mix is to build a small indoor obstacle course. This will not only stimulate their mind but also help teach them general commands. Even if they are initially obstinate, engaging in such activities can help strengthen the bond between you and your dog while teaching them right from wrong.

Facts about Pomeranian Chihuahua Mix

Chihuahua Pomeranian hybrids are also known by several names, including Chipom, Pomchi, Pomhuahua, and Chihuahua-Pomeranian. They are typically a 50/50 blend of both breeds, often featuring a Pomeranian body with a Chihuahua head.

These hybrids can live up to 18 years, which is longer than the average lifespan of many dog breeds. However, they are known to be quite vocal and may bark if they feel threatened. It's important to note that they can exhibit aggressive behavior towards strangers, so early socialization is essential for their development.

For more information you can visit The Paws Journalwebsite. On this website you will find many articles related to pets about pet breeds, health, training, nature, behavior.

Paws Journal